Four high-school friends, now in their early forties, all find themselves in the same situation – from being all married, they are suddenly all separated from their wives and newly single! Finally unleashed and on the loose, they try to relight the spark of their youth and let their inner-children spring to life. But along with the freedom comes the extra responsibilities – they now need to deal with the real world!

After moving in together and with no responsible adults, they start to discover that their independence is not all it's cracked up to be...

Whether getting back in shape or working on their flirting skills, each stand-alone episode follows the friends' search for happiness and the creative, ridiculous and absurd ways that they go about it. Separated is a funny and true reflection on friendship and rekindling lost youth, while rediscovering your true self and the experience of starting over again.
